

Proposal For Sunday Sale Of Liquor Brings Mixed Reaction

NORM BUTRICK, 29 Forest Park, Portland. "I can see both sides to the matter. I feel it would be good for summer business, and it wouldn't cause an increase in auto accidents. I do believe, though, that it should be limited to Class A establishments and I'm not in favor of take-out beer or alcoholic."

MRS. AZELIA ST. PETER, 80 Rivers St., Portland. "They're doing it everywhere else why not here in Maine? I am not in favor of the beer or ale take-out sales, but I think it is all right to have liquor served in restaurants on Sunday. And I don't believe there would be any more accidents because of it."

EDWARD I. WOOLF, 153 Oxford St., Portland. "I am definitely against Sunday liquor sales. I feel it would lead to more accidents and, besides, and I'm afraid it would show we are too anxious to make a dollar than to follow our moral sense. We are forgetting our moral and religious obligations."

GERARD SAMSON, 55 Shank St., Lewiston. "I think Sunday liquor sales would benefit the State of Maine, especially in the tourist business. I don't believe people will drink any more just because it's sold on Sunday, and I doubt it would lead to any more highway accidents than we have right now."

MRS. RICHARD NELSON, 1171 Shore Road, Cape Elizabeth. "I'm against Sunday liquor sales. I go into a restaurant on Sunday days they should buy it during the week. I don't think it would increase the tourist trade, and it might help bring more revenue into the state after a while, too."

MRS. BEVERLY COLLINS, 18 Glen Haven Road, Portland. "I'm for it. I think it would be nice to go into a restaurant on Sunday days and have a drink with dinner. However, I think it should be kept out of the bars on Sunday, it might help bring more revenue into the state after a while, too."

Dominican Planes Blast Rebel Radio Off The Air

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominica. The air attack on the island of the rebel radio station Thursday made a headline in the news. The U.S. Embassy in Santo Domingo reported that the station's transmitter was destroyed by two F-4 Phantom II fighters. The station, known as Radio Libertad, was the only station in the island. The attack was carried out by the Dominican Air Force. The station had been broadcasting since 1959. It was a key source of information for the rebels. The Dominican government said the station was a major threat to national security. The rebels said the attack was a violation of international law. The station's location was in the mountains of the island. The attack was a surprise. The station had been operating for years without incident. The Dominican government said it was a major victory.
